Course Description

This course provides an in-depth analysis of personal effectiveness and offers practical strategies for improving self-management and interpersonal relations towards professional effectiveness. Students will explore a wide range of skills essential for managing both ordinary and challenging situations. The content focuses on developing a sense of purpose, maintaining direction under pressure, and building the confidence to manage diverse people and circumstances. Through this course, the students will learn to make the most of all the personal resources at their disposal. Key practical areas include personal development, communication, etiquette, health, financial literacy and career management. The aim is to empower students to harness their talents, treasure (energy), and time to achieve their most important personal and professional goals, first by setting a vision for themselves.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this course, students should be able to:

- Discuss how to explore life situations with positive self-esteem, openness to others, and a proactive mindstyle.
- Establish meaningful personal and professional goals from established vision and develop consistent strategies for their attainment.
- Identify and demonstrate appropriate comportment, etiquette, and communication skills for a variety of social and professional contexts.
- Articulate and apply principles for maintaining a healthy and integrated sound lifestyle.

Assessment

Assessment for students is based on 35% continuous assessment (CA). 5% participation and 30% from bimonthly mini projects.

65% - final written examination.
